Child and Adolescent Literature

Children's books in Christian education—they are being seen and used everywhere...in Sunday School...in worship...in weekday programs...in Bible studies...in Vacation Church Camp...in parents' groups...in youth groups...in homes.

Why should we use children's literature in Christian education? How do you select good children's books to use? What are some ways of using them? Where can you turn for help in evaluating and selecting good ones? Join us as we investigate these questions and spend hands-on time with lots of children's books!

Rebecca Davis is Assistant Professor of Religion and Christian Education at Presbyterian College. She has served congregations in WV, AL, TX and NC as pastor and educator. Becky also teaches as adjunct professor at Union-PSCE in Charlotte.

Pamela Mitchell-Legg is a professor of Christian Education at Union-PSCE in Charlotte. Her areas of scholarship include educational theory, the history of education, curriculum design, and contemporary media.
